

Discover ▾

Log in | Sign up

Hybrids

mutants

neko

dystopia

700 75 78

Chapter 1 by Phantim

"Quit smiling like that," I said.

"Like what?" he asked through a large grin.

"Like... like I don't know! Just stop," I said.

"Pass," he replied.

"Ugh! You are infuriating..." I said.

"Yep," he replied.

"Fine. Thank you Demetri," I give him what he wanted to hear.

He had just saved me from a bunch of mutants after all.

"No problem Kitty," he said.

Ugh, I hate it when he calls me that. Just because I have "cat" ears sprouting from the top of my head. Like the monsters we had just killed. We're hybrids. Made in test-tubes, science freaks, whatever. It's been a while since the outbreak, it's mostly just mutants now. They're not as tough even for us.

Demetri had lightning at his command, but all I had was good senses, agility, and uh... Cat ears.

Login

or

Create new account

See more of Story Wars

Demetri can sense my discomfort at the use of my nickname and his stupid smile gets even bigger.

Chapter 2 by Glowy-Druglord

"Relax," my friend sitting on the counter behind him said, biting into a large apple. She was the most obvious hybrid I had ever seen, though I never mentioned it to her. She was bred with Siberian tiger and Red tailed hawk, her wings were spread out causally. She had no problem being a hybrid, she was strong, agile, and had the ability of flight.

Demetri looked back at her, smiling more like an idiot as he noticed the orange and black fur appearing on her arms. "You're a kitty too, you know." She glared at him with rage filled yellow eyes, nailing him in the head with the half eaten apple. "Ouch. What was that for?"

She growled like a tiger, baring her fangs. "I already told you not to call me kitty." Her genetic mutation was cooler than mine, and far better at that much.

"Relax, Vali," Demetri hissed, rubbing the top of his head. "I was just joking."

"I don't usually joke, dear," she hissed at him. She smiled without humor, her eyes harsh and cold. She ran her fingers through her blonde hair, the long locks straight and wild. "I hate hiding like this. I want to crush someone's skull."

"Yeesh," I said, scooting away from her. "Graphic."

She smiled with a full fanged grin. "Can't help it." She looked at the scar on her wrist, frowning with anger. I never knew where it came from but she never spoke of it. Every time I tried to ask her about it, she nearly bit my head off.

Chapter 3 by Sammi Fay

"So, uh, Kitty, what's the plan now?" Demetri asked, rubbing in the fact that the plan, my plan, didn't work. [

See more of Story Wars

Login

or

Create new account

will only last so long.

I, unfortunately, had this brilliant idea to take a shortcut from our usual route. Of course, we ran into some mutants that I wouldn't exactly call our friends.

They are just like us, part human-part whatever, but that doesn't mean they want to join together and rebuild the world. They want to rule it, by themselves, that's why we call them Royals. They try to get the most powerful mutants on their side so they can slowly knock out the rest. Out of the three of us, I'm the only one that wasn't invited. Due to that, and the fact that they're SADISTIC, Demetri and Vali rejected their offer and together we became members on their hit list.

"Well," I started shyly, guilt filling my voice at the memory of my almost-fatal mistake, "We continue with the plan. I mean, this might've not been the house we were aiming for, but it has food." I gestured to the apple that Vali had thrown at Demetri, giggling.

Demetri frowned as Vali gave him an innocent looking smile, "That depends if Vali hasn't eaten it all yet." I'm pretty sure I heard him mumble something about her eating habits after.

Vali must've heard, being closer, because her wings flushed out in anger. I felt intimidated even though her anger wasn't directed towards me. She leaped off of the counter swiftly and strode over to Demetri. "You might've saved Remm from a Royal, but don't forget who saved your little butt from one," She snarled.

With Demetri and Vali bickering and the thought of a full stomach, it was easy to forget that the reason we were hiding in the wrong house was due to the Royals scavenging our usual neighborhood in search of us. The Royals / had alerted.

Chapter 4 by Xang_98

The sun went back to its slumber. A day passed and now the howling of the night is getting me. I shuddered, the cold wind slapped my bare skin. I looked at the night sky. It is clear leaving the thin crescent of the moon shining above us. Our only natural light for the night.

See more of Story Wars

"I miss the stars," I said my thoughts aloud.

Login

or

Create new account

The light behind me was dimming, but the moonlight warmed the cave a bit.

The cave was only the safest place we can think of for a good rest from the Royals. Demetri and Vali sat near the fireplace, warming themselves.

"It has been ten years, huh," Vali said under her breath. Her eyes filled with sadness.

Yes, it has been ten years since "The Cry." A phenomenon where the stars suddenly fell, like comets, one after another until all disappeared from the sky. No one understood the reason behind it. Be they commoners or high-class scientist, looking through the telescope was impossible. One can only see an empty space, but when directed to the sun, it is not like the sun that we usually see it before that event, it was just light. Neither can devices sent out the earth give a promising result, it is always empty. It's either we are the only planet left or something is covering our atmosphere, and that theory is most probable. Then after three years, I was abducted with many others to be used as experiments, as guinea pigs for their so called a better world and most probable, power. I don't know if it is connected with that phenomenon.

"Hey, Kitty! What are you dreaming about there? Give me some fur would you? It's getting damn cold!" he wrapped himself with his arms continuously shuddering.

I did not reply. Like hell would I give him warmth! He cuddled his own self like a ball.

"Good thing we are animal breeds," Vali said, meaning both of us. She wrapped herself around her humongous wings.

Demetri looks like a pure human other than his ability to command lighting. He said he did not know what breed he had. While Vali, she had a breed of a whooper swan, giving her big white wings.

The ground shook. We shoot each other a look.

"What was that?" Vali looked at Demetri.

He looked at me then to Vali. "It was not me." he innocently said.

The three of us jumped to our feet and walked out the cave. There was fire among the housings.

"Look," her stare fixed on the sky.

I looked at where she was

See more of Story Wars

Login

or

Create new account

"T-the... the sky, it cracked...?"

Chapter 5 by Blue

The three of us dashed out of the cave to gaze up at this extraordinary scene above us, It seemed paramount as the sky ripped itself apart. Light shone through the gap as the crack widened and dashed further across the sky.

At first it was blinding, the light that shined through. Our gaping mouths widened as we squinted our eyes, except for Vali whom covered herself with her wings.

The light stayed that way for an uncomfortable amount of time, it kept shining so intensely that even through my hand and eyelids, it started piercing my sensitive eyes.

and then..... with a dazzling display of power that shook humility and rocked us to our bones; the sky exploded. A deafening boom left a ringing in my ears as chunks started falling from the sky; burning in the atmosphere it looked like it was raining hell.

Demetri was the first to yell "BACK TO THE CAVE!"

The ringing in my ears was so strong that I barely heard him; half blind and deaf I staggered about.

"Come on Kitty" Vali swooped me off my feet and flew me into the cave with Demetri right behind us.

I didn't even begin to protest my irritating nickname.

We watched from the mouth of our cave in the hills as hellfire rained upon the villages and towns below us.

"What is happening!?" I whimpered

Vali and Demetri just stared, the first time I had seen either of them speechless.

See more of Story Wars

Chapter 6 by Glowly-Dragon

Vali's fearless blue eyes loomed over me, her hands, and her beautiful brown wings droop in despair. Demetri rubbed her back gently and it was the first

Login

or

Create new account

time I have ever seen her not snap at him. I pressed myself against her muscular side, seeking comfort for the fright that was sickening me. She didn't pull away, but welcomed me beneath her wing.

"Demetri, Remm," she began with a soft whimper. "Our world is literally falling apart."

Chapter 7 by Anni Leigh (GONE...)

I closed my eyes. She was right.

"We can't just, give up!" Demetri yelled, as he backed away from Vali, who still held her head in her hands. "There must be something we can do..." I say, trying to cheer things up, and not act all hopeless. But Vali slides against the stone wall, and onto the ground, digging her face into her knees.

"Vali!" Demetri yelled "stop!". It seemed like our winged friend had just been told that she had two more minutes to live. Well...

He went at her, trying to make her stand up, but she was like a rag doll. "Say something!" he screamed again, but it had no effect on her. "Let's just think" I say to him, "and leave her alone for a few minutes". "We don't have a few minutes, Remm!" he yelled once again. This time, I felt a sudden shake in the ground, and saw lightning outside the cave.

"Demetri, just stop. It's not helping". We both turn to Vali, who had lifted her head up, and stared at us with tired eyes, "both of you, just go". Her voice was fading, and I knew she wouldn't last much longer. I noticed Demetri open his mouth to speak, but I held my hand up before he could say anything. "Do it for us, Vali. Please". She looked up, and with a sudden burst of hope, I knew everything would be all right. But instead, she flopped down, her head hitting the cold floor. I ran over to her, as did Demetri. "Vali?" I asked, but there was no answer.

All of a sudden, a ship landed right outside. Demetri motioned me to check it out, and I did. I stepped onto a small ramp that led inside it, and noticed a few other hybrids, just like me. "Get in!" one of them yelled. "Wh- what is happening?" I stutter. "We're saving you!" the same one replied again, "the world is about to collapse, and we need to get out of here!".

"And my friends?". "Get them, now!". I jumped out, and darted for Demetri and Vali. "They've come to save us" I say. Demetri shakes his head. "She can't move. I'll stay with her." I stare at him, eyes widened. "No, she would w... before I can finish, he stands up and kisses me. "go!" I stumble backwards, stur...

See more of Story Wars

Login

or

Create new account

Someone grabs and drags me back to the ship. I scream, kick and yell, but whoever it is doesn't let go. I'm strapped to one of the seats, and I feel a needle pushed into my neck. I notice two figures standing outside of the cave just as everything goes blurry.

That was the last time I saw Demetri and Vali.

Chapter 8 by Glowy-Druglord

When I awoke, I saw two hazy shapes looking over at me and standing up. From their outlines, one looked like a large muscular male and the other, a slender female. They approached me and I began to kick and scream bloody murder, seeing them back away with fear. The female placed a gentle hand on my shoulder, and her touch soothed me.

"It's alright, Remm," she murmured. I widened my eyes as the blurriness disappeared, seeing her beautiful shaped face and fiery red hair. She was a hybrid, I just knew it. But, she didn't seem to have any animal, or maybe I just wasn't looking. She had a Slovic accent and it was quite heavy. "We won't hurt you."

The male had scars along his cheeks, making his already intimidating form scarier. "I make no promises." He had a very heavy Russian accent, and he looked down at me with disgust. He seemed to be bred with what seemed to be a Russian bear and Timber Wolf. That explained the nicked wolf ears on the top of his head, the jagged fangs slipping out from his bottom lip, the massive muscles.

The woman glared at the man, her beautiful pure white wings flushing out in anger. They were radiant and they reminded me too much of the fallen Vali. Tears streamed down my face in realization that I will never see my friends ever again.

"That's not true," the woman butted in. I cocked an eye brow at her, confused. "You'll find your friends eventually."

"H...how did you do that?" I stammered, frightened. She smiled warmly.

See more of Story Wars

Login or Create new account

See more of Story Wars

Login

or

Create new account

"Vell, I used to be," Ivan hissed. "But de Royals provided me vith nothing. Ve are the number vne resistance against de Royals. Ve found you and your friends right after you were but on Royal hit list."

Sage stood with calmness. "We have been watching you three for years now. And once the sky was beginning to fall, we acted and dragged you out of danger. Your friends were hurt and or refusing to leave." She extended her hand with a sly and noble smile.

"Remm, welcome to the Freebred Guard."

the end

Write a comment...

About

Rooms

Feedback

See more of Story Wars

Login

or

Create new account